On November 6, 1840, Governor Yell in his inaugural address said: The banks of the country are stretching forth their countless arms to grasp all that may be worth preserving, and too often we will find legislative interposition either tacitly approving or openly justifying their acts of usurpation--and still we submit to the most odious and unjust oppression without seeming to comprehend the heartless tyranny with which we are burdened. Are we ready to see the price of all our staple products raised and depressed at the will and caprice of these corporations, with their paper depreciated from twenty to fifty per cent., discount, to suit the convenience of stockholders and debtors, and the avarice of brokers and speculators? Rightly to remedy the existing evils, as far as prudence and sound policy will dictate, should be your first object. Let the strong arm of lawful authority interpose to teach...
