Excerpt from Confession of Faith, and Covenant: Also a Brief History of Union Church, Essex Street, Boston A church of Christ was gathered in Boylston Hall in January, 1819, under the pastoral care of Rev. James Sabine. Soon after, several of its members, in connection with other individuals, erected a meeting-house in Essex Street, which was dedicated to the worship of God in December of the same year. About two years afterwards, some difficulties arising, the church on the 6th of March, 1822, voted to return with their Pastor to Boylston Hall. A minority of the church, however, continued to worship in the meeting-house, and on the 28th of the same month requested a regular dismission from Essex Street church. This being granted, they were organized as a separate church, on the 10th of June following, by an Ecclesiastical council.
