Excerpt from The University Studies of Nebraska, Vol. 16 Forestry has joined the ranks of the great industries in developing the investigative side of the business and the establishment of forest experiment stations and a forest products laboratory by the Forest Service of the United States Department of Agriculture has been the first step in this direction. It has become the business of these stations and this laboratory to study the fundamental laws governing the life of the forest and their effect upon the final product - wood. That vast complex of environmental factors - the habitat - is beginning to be analyzed to discover in what ways man can help nature to produce more and better timber, in a shorter length of time and at less cost than nature has produced in the ages past. While perhaps, on account of economic conditions, industrial investigations have been given preference to purely silvicultural research yet investigations in establishing and growing forests have received no small amount of attention.
