 However, when Mr. Swasey invited me to come to Cleveland he was kind enough merely to say that the members of the Rowfant Club would like to hear a few remarks upon book clubs and matters pertaining thereto. It is therefore my purpose to make what might be termed a personal-experience talk. The subject in hand is too intensely practical to admit of anything other than a plain business talk. New acquaintances have sometimes asked what my line of business is. A number of years ago I organized a corporation, of which I arbitrarily made myself president, but as I found the business was interfering with my game of golf (which is none too good at best), I decided to give up the business. It proved a costly venture, because the stockholders complained of not getting any profits, so I had to buy up all the stock in order to get rid of my job. Since...
