Reviews

Here is the finest publication we have read right up until now. It is actually written in easy words instead of difficult to understand. Its been written in a remarkably easy way in fact it is only right after i finished reading this book in which basically changed me, modify the way i really believe.

Excerpt: . . . widow clapped her hands with delight, and there rose in Diefenbachs mind a picture of SemmePs face. He chuckled. Where to asked the chauffeur. Diefenbach turned to his companion. Oh, anywhere-- anywhere at all, said she. I just want to see how it feels. The chauffeur seemed to understand. He drove across to Fifth Avenue and then northward to and through the park. It was a moonlit night, the air was balmy, and the taxicab behaved beautifully; Diefenbach enjoyed it all as much as the widow did. For a while he kept his eyes upon the dial of the taximeter. Only forty cents! How ridiculously cheap! He would take the widow out in a taxicab every night. Then the indicator jumped to fifty cents. Tut! A mere trifle! Diefenbach ceased to look at it and looked at the widow instead. Now, when you are riding in an open vehicle with a charming woman and the moon is shining overhead and the road stretches smoothly on, without end, and the fragrance of spring is in the air--you know how it is, do you not Well, so it was with Diefenbach. The widow had never before seemed to him so fair. Never before had she smiled upon him so sweetly nor chatted so gaily about everything in the world save the one matter that troubled his mind. Diefenbach thought it all out very carefully. He reviewed his lonesome past, and he thought of his cheerless present and...
