Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Vineland Pioneers The early settlement of any town, village or city is not without interest to those persons who care for the past. If the place is that of their birth, or one familiar through a long residence, it holds a still deeper interest in the regard of all who love home and country. The early settlement of Vineland was in a manner unusual. In 1861, a large tract of land containing thousands of acres, was acquired by one man who desired to carry out certain ideals he had long cherished - founding a model town, made attractive and beautiful, with good roads, shaded walks, and well kept and productive farms, with fruit, vines and flowers; a place where the esthetic principle would appeal to resident and stranger alike, whose social advantages would attract and hold young and old, where the united labors of the people would benefit the whole community. To this land, a wilderness in fact, easily accessible from the large eastern cities, came settlers, drawn thither by the advantages of climate, soil, water and good markets. Settlers came from the bleak New England hills, the Middle states, the broad western prairies and from the crowded cities. Among them were men of superior education, men of ability, experience and enterprise; women of intellect, culture and refinement - a goodly class of settlers, alert to the possibilities of the hour. Through their energy, perseverance, and high moral character, they made Vineland a desirable place to reside. With the thought that sometime in the future there will be among the people then living in this place, some inquiry regarding the early settlement, some interest...
