EVALUATION OF FAULT-NORMALFAULT-PARALLEL DIRECTIONS ROTATED GROUND MOTIONS FOR RESPONSE HISTORY ANALYSIS OF AN INSTRUMENTED SIX-STORY BUILDING

Createspace. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 34 pages. Dimensions: 11.0in. x 8.5in. x 0.1in. According to regulatory building codes in United States (for example, 2010 California Building Code), at least two horizontal ground-motion components are required for threedimensional (3D) response history analysis (RHA) of buildings. For sites within 5 km of an active fault, these records should be rotated to fault-normalfault-parallel (FNFP) directions, and two RHA analyses should be performed separately (when FN and then FP are aligned with the transverse direction of the structural axes). It is assumed that this approach will lead to two sets of responses that envelope the range of possible responses over all nonredundant rotation angles. This assumption is examined here using a 3D computer model of a six-story reinforced-concrete instrumented building subjected to an ensemble of bidirectional near-fault ground motions. Peak responses of engineering demand parameters (EDPs) were obtained for rotation angles ranging from 0 through 180 for evaluating the FNFP directions. It is demonstrated that rotating ground motions to FNFP directions (1) does not always lead to the maximum responses over all angles, (2) does not always envelope the range of possible responses, and (3) does not provide maximum responses for all EDPs simultaneously even if it provides a maximum response for a specific EDP. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
