Excerpt from Association of Protestant Teachers of the Province of Quebec, Montreal Meeting, 1886: Address of the President Thus the thoughtful educator, while rightly appreciating the problem he has to solve, is placed in the midst of difficulties which are in individual cases often insoluble. It would, I think, be easy to show that the discordant views which prevail on such subjects as the range of school studies, the relation of these studies to health, the expediency of payment for results, the conducting of examinations, the relations of scientific and literary studies, and the bearing of moral and religious culture on the work of the school, largely depend on the more or less wide and accurate views which may be held in relation to the fundamental point above stated, that the educator has to train a being in a state of active growth, and differing in every succeeding day from its capabilities and attainments of the day before. Keeping this principle in view, we may now glance at a few current topics of educational discussion. If we ask what studies should first occupy the attention of the youthful pupil, two apparently contradictory answers are at once given. First, it is unquestionable that the child is naturally an observer and experimenter with everything within his reach. Therefore, his early lessons should be object lessons, and he should begin his education with science. But then it is also evident that memory and speech are developed more rapidly than thought, therefore, he should begin with words and memory lessons. The truth concealed under this apparent antagonism is that the average child conducts his own education in the way of accumulating facts and experiences, trying...
