RUSH MEDICAL COLLEGE: VALEDICTORY ADDRESS TO THE GRADUATING CLASS, 1870-1, BY MOSES GUNN, A. M., M.D., PROFESSOR OF SURGERY (CLASSIC REPRINT) (PAPERBACK)DOWNLOAD

Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Rush Medical College: Valedictory Address to the Graduating Class, 1870-1, by Moses Gunn, A. M., M.D., Professor of Surgery While this ever increasing scope and extension of study has gradually raised the standard of practical medicine and benefited mankind, it has been charged that its tendency has been towards a materialism which has often shocked spiritual sense and debased moral nature. Without here stopping to consider the truth of this statement, let us glance at some of the theories which have been advanced, and have seemed to warrant the charge, coming as they did from a scientific source, and claiming the merit of a refined philosophy. Not to go farther back than a period within my own recollection of scientific matters, the complacency of mankind in its manhood was not a little shocked by the statement that man had attained his present position at the head of animal existence, only as the last development in a progressive autogeny; that this self-development or plastic force in nature first brought forth the lowest forms of animal life; and that gradually acquiring power, and operating under ever improving circumstances and upon products which were ever advancing toward a higher degree of perfection, grade had succeeded to grade in an upward scale through the vast cycles of time, until mankind appeared upon the earth, the latest and most perfect in the series. That this last and crowning existence, in its individual embryonic life, passed rapidly through all the phases of a development representing successively all the inferior grades. That a constant improvement marked the ever succeeding generations, and that in the dim and distant future, out of the loins of the present...
