

Wildlife in North Carolina, Vol. 13: November 1949 (Classic Reprint) (Paperback)

By Rod Amundson

FBC LTD, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Wildlife in North Carolina, Vol. 13: November 1949 Like so many other wildlife forms which have economic value, beavers were placed in grave danger of extinction, and in many sections of the country were completely destroyed. Such was the case in North Carolina, according to biologists and other competent observers. There are, however, beavers in North Carolina today, but they are not the native species. Several years ago beavers were purchased from the State of Pennsylvania and released in several parts of the Tar Heel State. Prior to that time beavers had once been extinct in Pennsylvania, the game managers of that state having acquired beavers from Wisconsin. So the beavers found in North Carolina today are probably a species native to the north-central part of the country. The species seems to have become well-established in localities where it has been transplanted, but apparently is not spreading throughout the state at a rate comparable to the vast expansion which is occurring in some midwestern and western states.
