CONSIDERED WITH REFERENCE TO DOMAINS. If the people born in these domains--Fire, Earth, Air, and Water--do really embody the qualities of their triplicities, it must be plain to the thoughtful student that the cause of many an unhappy marriage can be traced to the attempted union of uncongenial elements. This has always been ascribed as a reason, though until recently very vague notions have been held in regard to the causes of such uncongeniality. Everybody has speculated and wondered at the quarrels and separations of the most excellent people considered individually, men and women who outside of the marital relation were the corner-stones of social and religious life. United, they were little short of demons. It is a shame and a disgrace, has been said, that those folks cannot get along together, and they certainly are not what they seemed to be before marriage, nor what they now appear to be when they are apart. All can call to mind example after example of such domestic infelicity, and so alarmingly frequent is this mismating that long ago marriage was called a lottery, and more lately pronounced a failure. We have spoken of magnetic attraction and repulsion with very little idea of what we were talking about. We have witnessed the most crucial suffering of married people, for which neither wife nor husband could ascribe any adequate cause. We have observed the quick repulsions which have taken place after marriage, and...
