THE LATTER-DAY SAINTS MILLENNIAL STAR, VOL. 66: APRIL 7, 1904 (CLASSIC REPRINT) (PAPERBACK)

Forgotten Books, United States, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . This book usually ship within 10-15 business days and we will endeavor to dispatch orders quicker than this where possible. Brand New Book. Excerpt from The Latter-Day Saints Millennial Star, Vol. 66: April 7, 1904 According to the latest statistics, we number souls, all told, in the Church, and most of these exist under the most unsatisfactory conditions. The continuous drain of emigration has depleted our ranks so much that it is barely possible to get a sufficient number of Saints together to formulate a good, healthy branch, if indeed it ever has been possible as the work of the Elder, coupled with the voice of God calling, has picked up souls here and there, often far from the railroad and almost always far from their neighbor Saints. At one time, not far gone, we were privileged to have a host of over five hundred Elders, and their energetic labors in new and old fields, left Saints in nearly every county in the south. Then, for some unseen reason, the numbers were cut down enormously, until now our scant two hundred can barely keep in touch with those already members of the Church. These are engaged in building up branches, and organizing Sunday schools and other organizations where convenient, in order to keep the Saints informed and not allow their zeal to subside. But, as we shall show, there is an abundance of other work being done by our Elders toward informing the ignorant about our precious truths. Our accurate statistics do not run farther back than six years, but during that time, there have been sent through our commissary department to the Elders for distribution and to enquiring investigators, the major part of the following editions of books...
